The Heschel Center for Sustainability

The Heschel Center for Sustainability works to promote a sustainable Israel: a just and cohesive society, a robust and democratic economy, and a healthy and productive environment for all its residents, now and in the future.

Our Vision

Since its founding in 1998, The Heschel Center has worked to promote a renewed social environmental vision for the future of Israel. We envision a society where wellbeing and prosperity are defined in terms of ecological health and social justice, where values of community, common destiny and compassion are the basis for our actions, and where we all participate in the making of the decisions that affect us through a fair and transparent process.

Our Strategy

We attract change-makers from all sectors of Israeli society and provide the knowledge, ideas and tools, as well as the support networks, to create innovative projects and platforms for change, and to inspire others to action. Over the years, we have established networks across diverse fields such as architecture and planning, agriculture, politics, health, education, industry, business, media, national and local government, NGOs, social enterprises, the military and many more, with hundreds of change-makers who create a ripple effect across Israeli society.
